

Why Not?

Life is so hard without you by my side,
But I'm letting go the heartache and the tears I have cried.
The trials and the pain we all must go through
Are things of this world and they're no longer with you.
There's no sadness in heaven so no tears will be shed.
It's the home of the living - the rebirth of the dead.
Heaven is like the smile on a young child's face.
It's the peace that God offers through his amazing grace.
It's the little things in life that come to us free
Like the vast sky above us and the things we can't see.
Heaven is love, because Jesus is there.
There's no longer a void. There's no longer a care.
I am still in this world, but I will look towards the sky.
I will remember you're in heaven and no longer ask why?
The question is "Why not?" Why shouldn't it be you?
You must have finished the task God gave you to do.
Death isn't a punishment. It's God's reward from above.
It's God saying, "Come home to me," as he reaches out in love.
I will still miss you each day, but I'll no longer ask why,
Because death opens the door to why we must die.

When heaven bound, God's love is found.
