

Let God Be Your Friend

I just had to tell you! I need you to know,
God said He is with you wherever you go.
He is there in the morning, when you open your eyes and at night in the darkness, He hears all your cries.
He knows that you blame Him for the things that are wrong and that you feel you're alone and you just don't belong.
There are times we as children have to let go of the pain, because a flower won't grow if it gets too much rain.
Inside you are crying - God knows this is true, but His arms are wide open and He's waiting for you.
There are people who love you and strangers who care, but you must take the first step. Then they will be there.
God loves you, My Friend, and today's the first day.
You must take each day slowly until you're well on your way.
There will be hills and valleys filled with laughter and pain, but there's a difference this time - you know God does remain.
The next time that Satan comes to knock at your door, tell him to go back to hell because you don't need him no more.
Let God be your Savior. Let God be your Friend.
I stand and applaud you. Now let this day end.
Tomorrow awaits you. Your past is now gone.
Remember God's with you and you're where you belong.
