

Things Will Change

I woke up this morning to a cool cloudy day.
I would guess by the skies there is rain on the way.
We can always use the rain to make the flowers grow,
But then the sun might help, because the temp has been so low.
The weather is like life on earth with its many lows and highs.
Some days you'll have the brightest sun and other days have cloudy skies.
Today may be your very worst day and all you can do is sit and cry.
You may feel that you are all alone and ask God to let you die.
Just like the weather things will change. Today is not the end.
In God's time you will laugh and smile. Your heart will finally mend.
Loved ones die. Jobs are lost. Tragedies bring you down.
Floods wash away. Tornados destroy. A smiling day changes to a frown.
Then one day you will see the sun. The storm has passed away.
You know your loved one is with God and peace surrounds your day.
Strangers' come and help rebuild. There are people all around.
Side by side they offer strength as your new life now is found.
If you're in life's storm and feeling low, there is help on the way.
Keep looking up. Don't give up hope. Today may be your day.